

rosey boehm photography digital camera workshops

Now there's a training course specially designed to teach you how to use your digital camera. As a professional photographer with more than 20 years' experience my digital camera workshops will give you the knowledge and practical expertise you need to get the best from your camera.

DSLR course

learn about depth of field explore aperture/shutter speed use manual settings get correct exposure every time learn about histograms master flash techniques create innovative compositions hone focusing skills complete practical exercises venue

Brompton Bowden Community Centre
19 Green Street
Brompton

course fees

bring a friend and you both receive a 15% discount

$175 per person – discount $150

Part A & Part B 2x 4 hours

$190 per person – discount $175

course content

Held over a full day (or 2 half day sessions) this course has a maximum of six participants, allowing for each person to receive individual attention to understand their own camera and its settings.

The main emphasis of this course is to explain the relationship between aperture and shutter speed. You will learn new skills to use available light and how and when to use your flash. The tricks and tips of portrait photography will also be explored, with practical exercises to help you become more innovative and imaginative with your compositions.

This course is only suited for those with cameras with manual settings, whether compact or DSLR.

course outcomes

Once the functions of aperture and shutter speed are simply explained a whole new depth of knowledge becomes available.

You will be able to confidently use your camera on manual settings, get correct exposures every time (well almost!) and become far more creative and confident with your photography.

- Please contact Rosey for further information or to make a booking.